

Contents

On the Cover

Safety, improved decision-making, and compliance were the initial drivers behind a monitoring project currently underway in one of London's wealthiest areas, Kensington and Chelsea.

Features

- 6 Monitoring: A Fast-Growing Discipline
Monitoring is playing a key role for a retrofit that retains existing façades of some of the most expensive real estate in the world.
Christopher Gill
- 14 Don't Forget That Flood Certification
The administrator of a Georgia planning and development department provides key advice for both homeowners and surveyors.
Terri L Turner, AICP, CFM
- 18 The Tepusquet Boundary Survey—Part 2
In this installment, a California surveyor provides the rest of the story: the boundary determination.
Justin Height, PS
- 44 Record Title—Part 3—Chain-Of-Title Problems
In the final installment, the author shows that real property ownership is the union of right, title, and interest therein.
Chuck Karayan, PS
- 48 Geospatially Measuring & Modeling an Israeli Archeology Site Nearly 2,500 Years Old
Technology is used to map a site where the Bible says Samson slew 1,000 Philistines with a jawbone of a donkey.
Daniel L. Perry, PS, MBA

Departments

- 33 Beyond the Boundary: A Strong Foundation
A successful project—one without cost overruns—often depends on the ability of the surveyor to provide accurate, up-to-date information.
Jim Nadeau, PS
- 36 Footsteps: Avienda San Juan Partnership vs. the City of San Clemente
This installment discusses zoning issues that affect both public and private surveyors.
Landon Blake, PS
- 40 GIS: Just a Tool: Myth #4: Getting Historic Surveying Information into a GIS Takes Too Long
In the final installment, the author dispels another myth and shows more ways to use a GIS.
Stephen C. Blaskey, PS
- 56 Vantage Point: Zoned Out
An examination of a city that has no zoning, and a city where the zoning is perhaps too restrictive.
Wendy Lathrop, PS, CFM

In This Issue

- 4 Editorial: The New Normal
The editor discusses the past four years and the next four years.
Marc Cheves, PS
- 47 Advertisers' Directory
- 55 MarketPlace