

Contents

On the Cover

In front of a full-scale replica of the Parthenon in Nashville's Centennial Park, Rob Weimorts works on a tree survey.

Features

8 Civic Duty—A Visit to Civic Engineering and Information Technologies

In more ways than one, this state-of-the-art Nashville firm has weathered the economy by diversifying into GIS and precise surveying.

By Marc Cheves, LS

16 Phased Contracting

A San Diego surveyor provides a solution to out-of-scope extra work—one of the thorniest aspects of client relations.

Michael J. Pallamary, LS

21 When Two Become One—A Look at the Law of Merger of Adjoining Parcels

With the increasing amount of in-fill projects across the country, parcel mergers take on added importance.

By Lloyd Pilchen, LS, Esq.

28 Building a Fully-Functioning County GIS in Five Years

Surveying and geodesy provide a key role in creating a useful public utility.

By Michael Dab, LS, PE

44 Full Steam Ahead—Applying 3-D Laser Scanning to a Boiler Plant Replacement Project

Scanning replaces traditional hand-measurements in a daunting and complicated project at North Carolina State University.

By Drew C. Bjorklund, AIA, Ed Oliveras, and Damian Lallathin

In This Issue

6 Editor's Corner: The Right Tools

By Marc Cheves, LS

54 Reconnaissance: Rewriting Legal Descriptions

By Gary Kent, LS

57 Vantage Point: Professionalism, Logic, and Law

By Wendy Lathrop, LS, CFM

64 Surveyor's Report: Licensure by Apprenticeship—Effects on the Surveying Profession

By Dave Gibson, LS, PhD

58 FeedBack

60 Advertisers' Directory

61 MarketPlace